They decided to leave school at the same time and see who arrived home first. They could then find out which route was shorter.

When the bell rang for dismissal, each boy took his usual route home. Thomas went by the back lane that was littered with paper and empty cans. Then he came to a busy road which he had to cross. Although the overhead bridge was nearby, he dashed across the road because he wanted to save some time. He heard a man shouting angrily and a bicycle bell ringing loudly. He turned around swiftly, but was too late. The cyclist crashed into him.

Thomas received treatment at a clinic for some bruises on his knees and elbows. When he returned home in the evening, he found his mother and Mark waiting at the door. Although his mother felt sad for him, she scolded him for not taking the overhead bridge.
