A merchant named Dylan set off to travel abroad. Before he left, he asked his neighbour, Ken, to keep a bar of gold for him while he was away.

Dylan could hardly believe his ears. Still, he knew it was pointless to argue with Ken. Thus, he went away peacefully.

A few days later, Ken's son accompanied Dylan to the city. On the way back, Dylan led the boy to a cave nearby. He gave the boy some food and water and told him to rest in the cave. Then Dylan closed the mouth of the cave with a rock.

When he reached home, his neighbour, Ken, greeted him and asked him where his son was.

Dylan replied in a sad tone, "I am sorry to tell you this. On our way back, a large eagle flew down and carried your son away. I could not do anything to stop it."

"Good afternoon, Madam. Are you Mrs. Lee?" asked June.

"Yes, I am. Is there anything I can do for you?" the lady answered.

June showed the wallet to her and said, "I think you dropped this at the bus-stop earlier today."

"Thank you very much for making the effort to bring it to me. I did not think I would get it back. It's getting late, you better go home now," replied the surprised Mrs. Lee.
