Big Brother and I amused ourselves by wrapping scribbled notes around hard candies, then using rubber-band slings to catapult them across. The day before, an (21) errant missile had unfortunately landed on the bald head of our neighbours' cook, who had rushed over to our house to (22) complain loudly to his counterpart.

Chagrined but defiant, Big Brother (23) stomped into the kitchen with a scowl. Seeing the watery porridge that had just been prepared by our cook on the stove, a thought entered his head. With a smile, Big Brother (24) blithely whipped up all the eggs, added ham and scallions, and made himself a king-sized sixteen-egg omelette.

"You can inform on me all you want!" he told our cook. "But first I'm going to treat myself to a decent breakfast for once, whether they approve or not! As for your buddy, that thump on his head will probably stimulate a full head of hair again! He should thank me for doing him a favour!" With that, he sailed into the dining-room with his omelette and emptied his plate with (25) relish; he soon wore a satisfied grin on his face.

Section F: Comprehension MCQ (5 x 1m = 5m)

Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 30.

"Master, the house...the house, it's on fire! They were bombing next door and a splinter landed on the upstairs parapet. Master, it is terrible. I came as quickly as I could. It was difficult to get the fire engine. Nothing can stop the blazes now."

Kheng was dumbfounded. He grabbed the nearest chair and collapsed onto it to relieve the weight of his weary body from those jellied legs. Then for the first time in his life, he beat his chest and banged his head against the wall. 5

"Woe, woe has befallen us all. Dear God, why is this happening to me? Why? Why? Why?" Each question was louder than the previous one. Kheng assembled his senses together and thought for a moment. He had to send someone he trusted and someone capable enough to conduct an on-the-spot survey. 10

"Ah Seng," he called to the young man as he drew him away from the others. "I have two safes in the office stacked with notes and share certificates. Here is the combination. Salvage every cent and hurry." 15

Ah Seng nodded in obedience and gathered a group of manservants to form a force against any eventual looters. Ah Seng and company trudged the entire three miles to what was left of Emerald Hall.

As they neared the scene, billows of smoke were apparent from the glow of the street lamps. Then suddenly, he was in front of heaps and heaps of smouldering concrete and debris. He looked for the house. It should be somewhere here. How was it that he could not recognize the surroundings? He had lived there for the past two years. There was a huge crowd of people around, shouting, pushing and craning their necks to have a better view. Could this be just another fire site along the way? He looked around to confirm his bearings. There was the Supreme Court in front of him, so the heap of concrete and debris behind him had to be Emerald Hall. His hands fell limp to his sides and he murmured in disbelief, "My God! My God!" 25

Section K: Comprehension Open-ended (10 x 2m = 20m)

Read the passage below carefully and answer questions 71 to 80.

I sat down at the hill top to examine my position. I could see all around me for miles. As far as my eyes could see, there was no sign of anyone. In the sky the birds sang – and then I heard that dreaded noise.

5 I realized that my position that I had thought so good, might actually be a trap, for there was no shelter anywhere. I sat quite still and hopeless, while the aeroplane came, flying high. It began to fly lower and circled round the hill. I could see one of the two men looking at me through his binoculars.

10 Suddenly it began to rise, and then flew rapidly away. My enemies had found me.

There was nowhere to hide. If you were in such a situation, there was only one way of escape. You must stay where you were and let your enemies search the place and not find you.

15 I walked down the hill and at the bend of the road, found a man working on the road. The roadman seemed ill. I saw my chance and offered to take his place and do his work. The roadman gladly accepted.

20 Then I set to work to dress for the part. I got my boots and clothes all dirty from the dust of the road. I rubbed dirt onto my face and kicked my boots against the stones until they looked rough enough for any roadman.

25 Just about midday, a big car came down the hill slowly. It passed me, then stopped. Two men got out and walked towards me.

"Good morning," said one of them.

30 I did not look up as they came near, and when he spoke, I straightened my back painfully in the manner of roadmen and looked at them steadily. I saw two pairs of eyes that missed nothing.

"Good morning," I replied.

35 The fat one noticed my boots, and with a word in German, drew the attention of his companion.

40 "You've good taste in boots," he said to me. "These could not have been made by a shoemaker in the countryside."

"They were not," I agreed calmly. "They were made in London. They were given to me by a gentleman who came here for a hunting holiday," I lied.

45 Again the fat one spoke in German. "Let's go. This fellow is all right."

They got into their car and left. I was relieved but I carried on with my work. It was lucky I did so, for about ten minutes later, the car returned, one of the men waving his hand at me. Those people left nothing to chance.
